Jupiter and Mercury rule strongly for good this day, which should be fortunate for most human activities.

The stare pressage great responsibilities for men who have constructive or executive ability. Men of large affairs, lawyers, professors and bankers come widers a sway making for service of far-reaching significance.

Lawmakers come under a rule of the stars in which there are influences muking for stubborn debate, dissentions, bitter rivaries and criticisms.

Label and scandal will be much in the public prints, but these will be the scum in the boiling of the social cauldran, the contents of which are to be purified and clarified.

Marriage is subject to a sway making for sensational social reforms that will benefit the family. Mercury seems to indicate that men and women will associate in a wage-saming or money-sharing partnership that will tend toward stability in family affairs.

This should be a most fortunate day

Yes! It is harmless.

Cash vs. Credit

Owing to the tremendous increase in our business we have adopted the cash basis. We will continue to offer what we believe to be more than elsowhere attempted in quality, style, variety, value and service, and in anticipation of the economies which will be effected, have already made appreciable reductions in prices recognized as lower than offered elsewhere.

One of the paradoxes of retail credit is the fact that customers receive the benefit of only a small fraction of its actual cost. Of the items which make up credit expense, the most obvious are:

Credit Men. Bookkeepers. 4. Postage and Stationery.
5. Uncollectible Accounts. 6. Interest on Capital.

3. Collectors. Of these, the last is the only expense of which the customer derives the benefit, and this only in the way of

Under the recent action of the Retail Credit Men's Association, thirty days is the maximum that credit stores will hereafter allow, so that this one privilege of time is curtailed without material reduction of the other five more important factors of expense, and without compensating advantage to customers, in eliminating all six of these costs, Zeliner's gives direct to the oustomer an advantage which is shared alike by those who heretofore have had credit and those who have paid cash. While, therefore, the slight inconvenience to a few customers is many times overbalanced to them, our new policy appeals with equal force to all cash

Zellner's acknowledges with appreciative thanks the favors extended us by our many patrons during the fortysix years of our history, and we feel that we owe a special debt of gratitude to those who have shared in our growth of business-an increase of 160 per cent during the present management. As each step in our development and changing policy has been open to the congratulations of approving public, we are confident in the belief that this new change will be accepted in the same spirit of approval and support, not only by our old friends, but by a host of new ones, who will now avail themselves of the advantages of dealing at Zellner's.

A BIRD IN THE HAND

1818(11) Information Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture.)

WIN SUCCESS WITH UNIFORM FLOCK

Pride, One of the Essentials to Poultry Success, Comes with One-Type Flock.

A good-looking flock, one in which the birds are all the same breed and are uniform in size and color, is a standard advertisement. The owner, if he is in the market to sell biroding stock, will find that such a flock materially alds in making sales. If the poultry raiser is interested only in the production of eggs and meat he will as a general rule, have greater success with such a flock. Good results with such a flock. Good results with such that does not look good is not impossible, but it is a matter of common observation that multry keepers who are indifferent about the looks of their slock rarely make notable successes. Their success is irregular and spassmodic. In practically every case the man who starts in the poultry hustness with a mongrel-looking flock and the man who starts in the poultry business with a mongrel-looking flook and who does well with it begins systematically to improve its appearance. Poultry having distinctive appearance seems to be essential to any marked libercame in poultry products.

Sufficient attention to secure a pleasing uniformity in a flook is in the highest degree practical. Experiencials shown over and over that wher this is lacking interest is apt to high production is not maintained. Beauty and utility of individuals should be combined. Those two points should be combined. Those two points should be kept constantly in alled in the selection and breeding of every flock.

In the work of developing a uniform utility flock the first step is to diskept constantly in oiled in the selection and breeding of every flock.

In the work of developing a uniform utility flock the first step is to discard absolutely will specimens that denot approach the standard weight of their breed. The standard weight for adult male and female birds in any breed are the most desirable for breeding specimens. The weight requirement should also apply to young birds for immature fowls are not fit for breeding and young birds at maturity that are much under weight are undesirable. While it is impractical to adhere to exact standard weights it is advisable to avoid variations of more than 5 or 5 per sent either above or below the standard.

A second consideration in the development of the flock is the selection of type. There is a difference of opinion among breeders as to the essentials of type. Unlike standard weights there is no exacting rule to guide the poultry state.

type. Unlike standard weights there is no exacting rule to guide the poultry raiser in selecting type. Experience and a trained eye will make a good judge. A safe rule to follow, particularly for beginners, is to reject all specimens that are unspeakably off-type and to use only the best birds in the breeding flock.
Closely related to the selection of type is the question of type is the question of vigor and vitality of the Strike. The standard type of a breed presents, with a certain size and form. A carriage and symmetry

FEEDING GREEN OUT BONE. Green out bone can often be pur hased from the butcher. This me chased from the butcher. This material when produced fresh makes an excellent substitute for beef scrap. It should be purchased in small quantities, as it can not be kept fresh for any length of time, and when spoiled may cause severe bowel trouble. It is best fed in a trough not oftener than every other day, allowing about one-half cunce per hird. which is expected to produce winter aggs.

This is true if the fault is with the birds themselves and not with the poultry keeper. Wrong management may put the best and most healthful flock out of condition. Bad ventilation of poultry houses, improper feeding—either underfeeding or overfeeding and especially the too free use of highly concentrated feed to force growth or eggs production—are common causes.

concentrated feed to force growth or egg production—sre common causes which make maturally sound and healthy fowis unduly susceptible to ordinary weather changes.

Appropriate size and type and the vitality that gives and expresses perfect health and condition are essentials in mating standard noultry for practical results. Every pourtry raiser who desires a utility flock of birds or uniform appearance should not neglect to give any one of these essentials his pareful consideration. They are equally essential to the breeder who desires to produce birds of high exhibition quality, for with these essentials as the foundation he can develop show birds that will be desirable also for their practical qualities.

Turk and Teuton Ambassador Morgenthau's Story of Great War Piots BY HENRY MORGENTHAU.

Wangenheim also showed great anxiety over the proposed removal of the government to Eski-Shebr. In early January, when everyone was expecting the arrival of the allied fleet, preparations had been made for moving the government to Asia Minor; and now at the first rumbling of the British and French guns, the special trains were prepared once more. Wangenheim and Pallavicini both told me of their unwillingness to accompany the suitan and the government to Asia Minor. Should the allies capture Constantineple, the ambassadors of the central powers would find thannesives cut off from their home countries and completely in the hands of the Turks. The Turks could then hold us as hostages, said Wangenheim. They urged Taisast to establish the emergency government at Adrianogle, from which town they could motor in and out of Constantinople, and then, in case the city were captured, they could make their escape home. The Turks, on the other hand, refused to adopt this suggestion because they foared an atlank from Bulgaria. Wangenheim and Pallavichi now found themselves between two fires. If they stayed in Constantinople they might become prisoners of the English and French on the other hand, if they went to Eski-Shehr, it was not unlikely that they would become prisoners of the Turks Many evidences of the filmsy basis on which rested the German and Turkish allhance had come to my attention, but this was about the most illuminating. Wangenheim knew, as did everybedy else, that in case the French and English captured to had seens so strauge now, this contributed that was uppermost in the minds who had suthed them into the war.
